

Greetings, this is a proposal by the Collective Opposition to Present Entrepreneurs, also known as COPE. We have been fighting for the revival of these great corporations of old, through constant campaigning, obsessive offerings, preference in purchase, and endless emotion. However, we cannot do this alone, we must rely on the government. The plan here is subsidies and regulations. We are campaigning for the government to offer subsidies to these dying or dead companies, so they can stay afloat and fight the evil likes of Amazon and all other competitors. These companies include but are not limited to: Toys R Us, Blockbuster, Radioshack, Payless Shoesource, Sport Authority, and Kodak. and we would like them to be subsidized with $1 Billion yearly, and erase all of their debts. And along with that, we must also campaign for online regulation, where the government can slow down the tyranny of Amazon. I'd like to personally call this, the "Digital Sales Tax," a 4% taxation on all online transactions. This will not only slow down the rampant online competition, but also fund the government's own subsidies to help these dying companies.

Some people have questioned our efforts, saying that they are a nostalgic, yet dangerous effort to disrupt the market. That our efforts are creating an economic situation far worse than the current state. To that I ask, what have you now? Are you happy now? It's likely to say that you aren't. But think in the past, the memories of socialization and interaction as you go into a store with your friends, it was an event. What use is an economy if you are not happy? This is not a cold-hearted economic plan, but a plan to resurrect the lost American people. So please, stand by my side if you want to be saved by the COPE.
